

Cortal Consors upgrades the status of Stock Inspector

Most stock market investors know the moment of disappointment. Instead of satisfactory gains, the investment portfolio statement shows a dreary performance where the share prices of earlier high-flyers have dropped below the original cost price.

As commented by the German head of Cortal Consors, Martin Daut, "Many investors fill their portfolios on a random basis and then fall on their faces in the process. Sometimes stock is bought on the recommendation of the bank consultant, other times it wanders into the portfolio on the basis of a supposed insider tip of a colleague. Investors often buy with no detailed knowledge of the enterprise concerned or their line of business or without having inspected the technical chart performance of the shares under question.

The availability of unambiguous ratings is of major significance for the investor. This is the only way he/she can simply compare shares with each other and then invest successfully

The screenshot shows the Cortal Consors website interface. At the top, there's a navigation bar with links like 'Home', 'Kunde werden', 'Tradieren', 'Finanzinfos', 'Anlegen', 'Vorsorgen', and 'Finanzieren'. Below this is a search bar and a main content area for 'DAIMLERCHRYSLER AG NAMENS-AKTIE O.N. (710000)'. The stock price is listed as 70,30 EUR, with a bid of 70,33 and an ask of 70,33. The page features a 'Fundamentalanalyse (26. September 2007)' section with various financial indicators like P/E ratio, EPS, and growth rates. There are also sections for 'Alternativen in der Branche' and 'Alternativen im Markt'.

"As far as Cortal Consors clients are concerned, knowledge gaps of this kind are a thing of the past and have been since 2004. „The online broker provides effective and simple support through the internet using the "Aktieninspektor" analysis program. The ratings involved are integrated universally into the overall Cortal Consors portal and are available to the clients whenever they need them.

As a reflection of positive resonance on the part of clients, this service has now been further upgraded. Extensive new search possibilities have been included, also in terms of rating, and an email service which keeps the client informed about stocks that have been up or down graded by theScreener. The investor now also finds the stock assessment in his portfolio, meaning that not only need for action is immediately recognizable, but that reasonable alternatives are offered at the same time.
