theScreener expands its stock analysis

theScreener Switzerland launches a new generation of its well-known stock reports. The research house extends its stock analysis to include key financial ratios in the evaluation of companies. The inclusion of the financial ratios with regard to industry benchmarks will significantly increase their relevance.

In addition to the well-known opportunities and risk assessments, important financial ratios to the more than 6'000 worldwide listed companies will also be made available to users of theScreener research reports in June 22 this year. These will provide an insight into the quality of the assets, financial and earnings positions of the analysed companies and are therefore of great significance for banks, asset managers and investors. The new reports not only include key figures such as leverage and EBIT, but will also be compared to industry standard values and hence increase their relevance. Furthermore, the key metrics will be presented in their historical development over a period of 5 years so that trends and developments are quickly identifiable.

With these improvements, the new analyses offer an even more comprehensive support for an investment decision in a company. Nevertheless, the automatic creation of reports in multiple languages, the simple availability with a click of the mouse and also the attractive price will be maintained.

"With the latest stage of development, we could increase the benefits of our analysis significantly without compromising the simple clarity. We are especially pleased that the expansions came out of specific customer needs and we could implement them promptly. Therefore, our equities analysis has set a further milestone in the market with regard to scope, quality and cost-efficiency", concludes Andreas Lusser, CEO of theScreener.
